Major Anomalies

USO — Oil ETF +3.02%

Cause: Oil prices surged on supply disruption fears after Iran attacked U.S. targets in the Gulf, escalating Middle East tensions.

Forward Impact: Oil prices are likely to stay elevated in the near term, but any de-escalation or increased OPEC+ supply could reverse gains.

SLV — Silver ETF -2.99%

Cause: Safe-haven demand for silver was overshadowed by a stronger dollar and rising bond yields amid geopolitical tensions with Iran.

Forward Impact: Silver may remain volatile as geopolitical risks persist, but a potential easing of tensions could lead to a rebound.

Hot Now

- Energy — Strong 1d and 5d momentum, leading the market
- Healthcare — Solid 1m and 5d performance, defensive strength
- Financials — Consistent positive returns across timeframes

Cold but Worth Watching

- Technology — Sharp 5d decline but positive 1d, potential bounce
- Consumer Discretionary — Weak 5d and 1d, but consumer spending may recover
- Materials — Negative across timeframes, but mean-reversion possible

Defensive and value sectors lead amid market rotation, while growth and cyclical sectors face headwinds but may see mean-reversion.

Daily Conclusion

Despite a geopolitical risk from Iran, markets are rotating out of Technology and Consumer Discretionary into Energy, Healthcare, and Financials, driven by a chip-led Nasdaq surge.
