⚠️ Major Anomalies

UNG — Natural Gas ETF `-5.05%`

Cause: Natural gas prices fell sharply as mild weather forecasts and elevated storage levels curbed demand expectations, with the broader risk-off tone in equities adding pressure to energy commodities.

Forward Impact: UNG may stay under pressure near-term unless a cold snap or supply disruption emerges, with traders watching weekly EIA storage data and weather models for a potential bounce.

🔥 Sector Heat Map

Hot Now

- Energy (XLE) — Strongest 1-month gain (+10.3%) with positive momentum across all three timeframes, signaling a clear leadership bid.
- Healthcare (XLV) — Consistent gains across 1d/5d/1m (+2.9% 5d, +5.3% 1m) showing defensive rotation with broad-based participation.
- Consumer Staples (XLP) — Steady positive momentum across all timeframes (+1.2% 5d, +5.3% 1m) confirming defensive demand despite a soft 1-day pullback.

Cold but Worth Watching

- Technology (XLK) — Worst 1-month performer (-3.9%) but a sharp +1.7% 1-day bounce hints at early stabilization and mean-reversion potential.

- Communication Services (XLC) — Deepest laggard (-4.0% 1m, -1.7% 5d) with oversold conditions that could set up a relief rally if risk appetite returns.
- Industrials (XLI) — Negative 1-month trend (-1.1%) yet the strongest 1-day move (+0.9%) suggests a possible inflection worth monitoring.

> Defensive and commodity-linked sectors (energy, healthcare, staples) are leading while growth/cyclical tech and communications lag, pointing to a risk-off rotation with early signs of oversold bounce potential in beaten-down growth names.

💡 Daily Conclusion

> Oil-driven energy strength and defensive rotation into healthcare and staples are dominating while technology and industrials lag amid Middle East supply fears.
