Major Anomalies

USO — Oil ETF +2.87%

Cause: Oil prices surged due to geopolitical tensions in the Middle East, particularly Pakistan's warning to Iran and Saudi strikes on Houthis, raising supply disruption fears.

Forward Impact: If tensions escalate, oil prices may continue to rise, benefiting USO, but any de-escalation could lead to a sharp pullback.

Industrials	-0.5%	-0.4%	-5.8%

Hot Now

- XLE — Energy shows strong momentum across all timeframes, with 1m gain of 12.6% and positive 1d/5d.
- XLU — Utilities have positive 1d and 5d, and despite slight 1m dip, they are defensive with recent strength.

Cold but Worth Watching

- XLY — Consumer Discretionary has significant 1m decline but may see mean-reversion if consumer spending stabilizes.
- XLI — Industrials have steep 1m drop, but recent 5d and 1d are less negative, suggesting potential bottoming.

Momentum is favoring energy and defensive utilities, while cyclical sectors like consumer discretionary and industrials are oversold and may rebound.

Daily Conclusion

Oil's surge past $100 on escalating Middle East conflict is the dominant macro theme, driving energy and utility outperformance while pressuring consumer discretionary and industrials.
