1. Treasury yields slide as investors flee to safety of bonds amid tech rout
   CNBC — 2026-10-15 12:56
   Treasury yields fell as investors fled tech stocks for bonds after September wholesale prices rose 6.3% year-over-year, above the 5.5% forecast, following a hotter-than-expected CPI. The 10-year yield dropped over 10 basis points to 5.089%, the 30-year fell over 9 basis points to 5.428%, and the 2-year slipped over 4 basis points to 4.757%. Fed funds futures priced at least one more quarter-point hike by year-end, with December seen as more likely than this month. The data reinforced expectations that the Fed will raise rates again in 2022.

⚠️ Major Anomalies

SLV — Silver ETF `-6.11%`

Cause: Silver plunged as safe-haven demand rotated into gold and Treasuries amid the geopolitical headlines, while industrial-metal demand concerns and a stronger dollar added to the selloff.

Forward Impact: Silver remains vulnerable to further downside if risk-off flows favor gold over industrial metals, but supply deficits could support a rebound.

ETH-USD — Ethereum `-3.14%`

Cause: Ethereum fell in sympathy with a broader crypto risk-off move as traders de-risked amid Middle East tensions and the tech-led equity selloff.

Forward Impact: ETH will likely stay correlated to Nasdaq and broader risk sentiment, with geopolitical headlines posing near-term downside risk.

XLK — Technology ETF `-2.98%`

Cause: Technology shares sold off broadly as geopolitical risk escalated from Houthi attacks on Saudi infrastructure and Hezbollah-Israel tensions, prompting a rotation out of high-beta growth names.

Forward Impact: Continued Middle East escalation could keep pressure on tech multiples, though any de-escalation or strong earnings would likely reverse the move quickly.

🔥 Sector Heat Map

Hot Now

- Healthcare (XLV) — Strong across all timeframes with +2.5% 1d, +3.0% 5d, +4.2% 1m, showing defensive leadership and consistent momentum.
- Consumer Staples (XLP) — Best 5d performer at +5.3% and positive on all timeframes, indicating classic risk-off rotation into staples.
- Energy (XLE) — Top 5d gain at +6.7% with positive 1d and 1m, driven by commodity strength and inflation hedging.

Cold but Worth Watching

- Financials (XLF) — Worst 1m performer at -3.8% but positive 5d (+1.4%), suggesting early stabilization and potential rate-sensitive rebound.
- Real Estate (XLRE) — Down -2.9% 1m yet +2.3% 5d, showing improving momentum that could mean-revert if yields fall.
- Communication Services (XLC) — Weakest 1d (-1.3%) and -2.5% 1m, but 5d only -0.4%, hinting at a possible oversold bounce.

> Defensive and commodity sectors are leading as investors rotate away from growth and rate-sensitive cyclicals amid a risk-off macro backdrop.

💡 Daily Conclusion

> Defensive rotation dominates as a tech-led selloff drives capital into bonds and safe-haven sectors amid sliding Treasury yields.
